Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from A Study of the Mackerels, Cybiids, and Tunas The body is generally slender and flattened laterally. The dorsal surface of the head is somewhat flattened. The caudal peduncle is thick and is round in cross section with no keels at its center. The eye ordinarily has an adipose eyelid. The corselet is not clearly defined, and the scales on the pectoral region are cycloid just like those on the rest of the body. There are many scales on the operole, the posterior edge of which is more or less indented. The interopercular bone is covered by the operculum so that it is almost invisible. The mouth is large and the tongue is small. The teeth are small and there is a single row in each jaw. Teeth are also seen sometimes on the vomer and the palatines. The fins are small and weak, and the rays are articulated both transversely and longitudinally. The first dorsal is slightly separated from the second dorsal. The skeleton is thin and weak. There are from 31 to 33 vertebrae. The neural spine of the first vertebra is not separate from the centrum. The last vertebra is not fused to the hypural. There are numerous pyloric caeca; they all open directly into the intestine and do not branch. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
