 Excerpt from Report of the President of Bowdoin College: For the Academic Year, 1892-93 The development of our present system of physical education dates from the building of the Sargent gymnasium in 1886. The work of the director has been along three lines, which include: First, a careful examination of each student and the prescription of exercises for the correction of physical weaknesses or defects. Second, required class exercise from December to April. Third, supervision of out - of-door sports. Special attention has been given to the required course and an attempt made to devise a satisfactory system of class work.
